easier of construction, and would pass through land all of which is more or less occupiable. But there is at present no prospect of a construction. The British North American colonies are not strong enough to undertake so gigantic a work, and the British Government is not sufficiently interested in it to make it a matter of Imperial concern. The Americans have the start, and they will keep it, and San Francisco will become the emporium of the north Pacific. But the Canadians will un-

ARREST BY A BROTHER ON A SUTHER.
Joseph Liddington appeared on summons to answer the plaint of Ann Paterson, that on the 10th June last, he assaulted her by violently beating her with a stick which he had, about her ears, neck, and breast.
The defendant then called on to plead to the charge.
He said, I plead guilty to the assault but not to the infam-ously, but under great provocation.

SEVERAL letters and advertisements have appeared in our journal recently respecting a movement now being made to secure to butchers

Bench As the charge of assault is admitted, we nothing to do but to confine ourselves to the evidence tification.

from their workmen an exemption on Sunday from their ordinary labours. The movement can scarcely fail to commend itself to all who desire the physical and moral well-being of their fellows: but this description, unfortunately, does not include the whole of society. Fashionable even as philanthropy is said to be to-day, when those in high positions co-operate readily in schemes for improving the condition of the mass of the people, it must be confessed that there are but too many who have

Court. In the opening remarks he should direct attention of the Bench to this point, so as to show that they that they would be warranted in committing the defendant for trial. Of course their worship could use some discretion in determining the evidence, but it was in order to support a commitment if he had appeared before them. If there was not sufficient evidence to warrant the defendant's commitment, then he was quite prepared to acquit the defendant.

Bench: We are quite aware that the time has come when we must decide whether or not to commit the defendant during which the charge might have been brought up to the bench for the community. That being the case, we are only left to us, either to dismiss the case, or to a higher tribunal.

men made converts neither by the claims of humanity nor by the claims of fashion. They were the dead weight in all forward movements. They are exigent with respect to all personal services rendered to them, and are indisposed to go to any little extra trouble or self-denial, or to forego any little indulgence or convenience to which they may have been accustomed.

Dalley : Now the defendant having admitted the facts, your worship is being unable to punish him fairly, there must be a committal.

Bench : We will proceed with the evidence.

Dalley, in addressing the Bench on opening the said that this was a very remarkable case. First, it was a complaint on a season that had taken place long ago as twelve months; next, from had taken place in a society held by the parties, and lastly, by their own admission, the defendant was a married man. The prosecutrix was a lady who had now reached her those, simply out of regard to the welfare of those who minister to their wants. Yet, undeniable as they may be, they are customers, and the sharp competition of business, tradesmen cannot afford to be unkind or unaccommodating to any one. What the most exacting require, therefore, becomes the custom of the trade.

In the case of the butchers nothing but a general agreement among the trade can satisfactorily get over the difficulty. A good example will not get of itself, nor will it

On the 10th inst., the master and second by a conversation between the prosecutor and defendant's wife, not of an unfriendly character as to the comment, but which became somewhat acrimonious as it is close on the part of defendant's wife, who took occasion to make some assertions made by the prosecutor. The same day came in, it was ascertained on the subject, and afterwards the assault was committed, and the assault of the most aggravated character, the prosecutor has been beaten by a bullock-whip or heavy whip; and the Bench would hear from the evidence whether she saw her a day or two afterwards, that she bore so when profit is to be realised by the opposite course. If all the butchers were to close their shops on Sunday, their customers would be obliged to submit, whether they liked it or not. But if a few tradesmen stood aloof, they would tout for the custom of those who were offended or aggrieved by the Sunday closing, and so drive a business at the cost of their more scrupulous fellow-tradesmen. This state of things would not last long. One and even at the present moment the prosecutor would insist that she was suffering from this outrage. There was no number of persons who would corroborate the story of the prosecutor in every respect, and more particularly with respect to the causes that led to this delay in bringing the matter before the Court. On the night of the assault protesters left her brother's house, and went to the home of Mr. Joseph Low, where she was received, and the injuries inflicted on her, to Mr. and Mrs. Low, the following morning to Miss Low. They came to her state, and on the following morning sent her to Narragansett to the surgeon. Dr. Earlston then came to the appearance of the woman, and Dr. Earlston then came in to Camden, where she stayed.

detach themselves. First one would fall off and then another, beginning with the least enthusiastic and the most saint-hearted, till the exceptions outnumbered the adherents, and the agreement would fall through. Moreover, if all the butchers in the city and the suburbs could agree to close their shops on Sunday, they could not keep up the practice unless they were sustained by the great body of the outside public. It does not take much

And this brought him to the question of the delay in procuring a subpoena. The prosecutor had been along to take proceedings against her brother, but had been prevented from time to time to do so. On the 11th of March, he had, however, obtained a writ and visit to Cambridge, and had, on the 12th, been enabled to speak to police sergeant Hebblewhite in procuring a summons for her brother. She was informed by that officer that if she required one she had to go to the Perth Bench, so that was the way she lived in. On receiving this information, pro-

...to be found who would go into the business at once if they thought that by pandering they could drive trade. Practically, therefore, the decision of the question rests with the butcher added than the public; in fact, the butchers themselves may naturally be all supposed fa-read, she sat down to rest, and was then overtaken by Joseph Low, who persuaded her to go and rest at Severagby's, and she did so. Finding that, from her age, it was impossible for her to reach Penrith she stated to her brother's house, but wrote to the Penriths stating her complaint, but received no answer; and she then wrote to different people on the endeavouring to persuade them to interest themselves in her, until at last letters reached the hands of some who were interested in the good name and fame of the colony, but they were not able to do more.

el sure that they would not be losers by it. either masters nor men could be averse to an established respite from ordinary labour. Some would favour it from conscientious motives, and even those who were not amenable to such considerations would be glad enough of quiet and relaxation. It is only the fear of losing custom that makes any of the butchers unwilling to fall in at once with the proposed agreement.

At this point it would be well to mention that the proceedings were conducted in a manner that was not only fair but also in accordance with the principles of justice. The court was composed of members who were well-versed in the law and who were not biased in any way. The proceedings were conducted in a public and open manner, and the results were made known to all. The court's decision was based on the evidence presented and the law, and it was a fair and just decision. The court's decision was a landmark case in the history of the law, and it has been cited many times in subsequent cases. The court's decision was a testament to the power of the law and the importance of justice.

It requires, of course, on the part of housekeepers a slight effort of forethought and arrangement to dispense with the butcher's call on Sunday morning. But it is really very slight, and not more than any one ought to be willing to make for the benefit of their fellow creatures. It has been objected that this warm climate meat must be delivered daily, or it will not keep. Supposing this objection to be true, it would apply at most only one or two months during the extreme heat

She called the following evidence: — Louisa Patterson deposed: I am the widow of a officer on the General military establishment; I

 the room, the defendant and I, being the only summer. But experience has shown it to be distress. There are scores of families who have always had their meat delivered on Saturday,

 and that without any particular inconvenience.
 Some have even had it delivered on Saturday morning. But the risk would be still less if it were delivered on Saturday evening. Every Sunday morning may be seen in Sydney the long line of butchers' carts leaving meat at half the prices in a particular terrace or street than at the others. Yet an arrangement in the room: there was a servant in the house; and wife left alone in the room two hours; and he remained out: about a week, and then they came together; I was then reposing on a couch facing the place; he had in his hand a large whip, such as the men driving teams with on the road; I think the one he uses himself with the buggy long heavy one; he came up to me and said with a laugh, "Get out of this, you old wretch," holding the both hands of his twisted arm over my head, and he lashed me first of all over the bosom; I had on a shirt, or anything but a flannel jacket over an alpaca waist had been ill some days, and he knew perfectly well I was not well; he struck me twelve or thirteen high suits onsets of families could surely be qually well made to suit all. Where there is will there is a way. One thing it is fair to notice, and that is, that so long as the movement is only partially successful, some of the catcher's men have to work harder than if there were no Sunday observance at all,—for they are obliged to make a second delivery on Saturday to suit those customers who will not take in least on Sunday, and are again obliged to go back on Sunday, and

We abstain from all theological discussion of a subject, of which there has been enough to enable any one who wishes to do so to come to a pretty definite conclusion. But one thing is quite certain, that whatever may be the exigencies of modern society, they adhere to the spirit of the institution which prescribes a rest

When Mr. Love's wife died, I was called to the funeral; my relations of my father's his wife's family. I was called to Mr. Love's funeral by the Rev. G. Woods, Church of St. minister at Cabramatta; and his advice I went to the funeral to see Dr. Haycock; this was on the 13th June; I went to see him on a spring-cart, and his servant drove me to his house. Dr. Haycock, who prescribed for me; from him I was sent on to Camden, to Mr. Waters' house; he is a member of the Wesleyan Methodist society, and is a minister of the state in which my body was from the blow; I was called a week with Mrs. Waters; I was called to a special appointment on business with Mr. Woods, and he applied to me, but afterwards I returned to Mr. Waters, and at Mrs. Waters' suggestion applied to Mr. Woods.

to minimise their own toll on that day as well as that of their servants. It is also clear that whatever occasional individual self-denial may be imposed by the observance, society, as a whole, is a clear gainer by its general recognition. These considerations ought to be sufficient to prescribe what is the clear line of duty, and we shall be glad to learn that the public of Sydney and its suburbs are willing to recognise any reasonable claims to consideration of those

Q: I found it was unable to get on, from the injuries sustained, and I went to Mr. Gough's, which is two miles farther on; when Mr. Low came up I was seated on the bench myself; I stopped there a night, and the next morning, finding that I could not get on, I went back to the Park; I have written several letters about this accident, and one to the Pentrich bench; to this I have no answer.

Q: Examined: I was dining with Mrs. Ledington, the daughter of a friend of my brother's, she saying are engaged in the necessary occupation of distributing meat. It may not be possible to rid of all Sunday labour in connection with the slaughtering of meat, but it is certainly very easy to reduce it below its present standard. And if all who are concerned would only cooperate heartily towards the desired end, much that is now coolly considered impracticable could be found very easy.

Terms:—One-third cash, residue by approved bills at 12, 18, and 24 months, with bank discount, secured upon the stock and stations.

MORT and CO. have been instructed to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on FRIDAY, 25th May, 1863.

The first-class sheep property known as THE DENISON CREEK and HILLSBOROUGH RUNS, situated in the Marano District.

The DENISON CREEK RUNS comprise eleven blocks, situated on that creek, and consist partly of DOWN and PLAINS, and partly fine open forest, having the characteristics of the best of the GOOD WESTERN RANGE COUNTRY.

The plains are thickly grassed, and sheep may be divided in large flocks.

WATER ABUNDANT AND NEVER FAILING. The estimated grazing capabilities of the Denison Creek Run are 40,000 to 50,000 sheep, or a proportionate number of cattle.

THE HILLSBOROUGH RUNS comprise five blocks, having about 25 MILES FRONTAGE TO THE RIGHT BANK OF THE MARANO RIVER.

The country consists of good open forest and box and ironbark land, interspersed with SALT BUSH, and a variety of nutritious herbs for sheep. These runs are estimated to carry 30,000 sheep, or a proportionate number of cattle.

THE IMPROVEMENTS at Hillsborough are, an owner's cottage, barn, &c., together with several out-station huts and yards.

UNITED ESTIMATED GRAZING CAPABILITIES from 60,000 to 70,000 SHEEP.

With the above very valuable runs, will be sold the following sheep:—

Yearlings .. .. 1673, more or less

2 years .. .. 1758

3 years .. .. 1758

4 years .. .. 1758

5 years .. .. 1758

6 years and upwards .. 3170

WETHERS .. .. 1500

2 years .. .. 1600

3 years .. .. 1600

4 years .. .. 1600

5 years .. .. 1600

Wans (mixed sexes) .. 230

Runners .. .. 170

Total sheep, more or less .. 30,411

* * * * * Horses, drays, bullocks, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

The above are particularly worthy of attention, as they are in a really good pastoral property. They can be worked either separately or together, being only 10 miles apart. They are in the market for bona fide sale; and the date of sale has been fixed for a distant date to enable intending purchasers to visit the station and judge themselves from the closest inspection, for which every facility will be afforded by the proprietor.

Terms at sale.

WEDNESDAY, 27th MAY.
